Steep Coast of Brittany

EXPLORE THE CÔTES D'ARMOR

Home to countless seabirds and wildflowers that transform fields into a colourful sea – that is the north of Brittany. Also known as the Côtes d'Armor, the coastline stretches for around 350 kilometres. The cliffs are rugged and spectacular to look at – a true hiking mecca and home to this nine-day Eurohike trip. Above all, the relationship between land and sea is evident in Brittany. In the rhythm of the tides, the rushing sea flows inland every day and rushes out again. Be a witness to the different coastal formations when hiking in France from east to west.

Details about hiking holidays along the cliffs of Brittany

You walk almost exclusively on old toll roads from the Goëlo coast to the pink granite coast through enchanting France. You get to see all sorts of things: artichoke fields by the sea, an abandoned lighthouse between a village, a cauliflower field and farmers who work their fields with tractors. Here you can still find the real rural idyll. So it is not surprising that nature lovers will always be astonished during the stages. Fields full of orchids, poppies, kale, heather or gorse shine brightly. Add to that the salty air and lonely beaches to take a refreshing foot bath. Delightful, that's Brittany!

The highlights of the hiking trip in Brittany

- Perros-Guirec: The small French community on the north coast is charming, winding and offers its visitors a picture-perfect harbour. The place also becomes a real tourist hotspot in summer.
- Sept Îles: The 'Seven Islands' are one of the oldest bird sanctuaries in France and are home to penguins and gannets, among others.
